

For Immediate Release

Our annual NATIVE PLANT SALE is back!

Saturday, June 12, 9am-5pm

Nurture & Shelter Birds, Bees & Butterflies!

Just in time for rainy season, Tropical Audubon Society's Master Gardeners are delighted to announce the return of our organization's annual Native Plant Sale! Help us celebrate our first LIVE event in 15 months; resolve to spruce up your native plantings; and pick up your FREE South Florida guide to "Bird-friendly Gardening" because summer's the ideal time to dig in!

The native plants on offer will help attract and support wildlife, and will transform your yard, patio or balcony into a thriving, low-maintenance habitat. While you're on campus, visit our Bird-friendly Demonstration Garden and get cultivation tips from our resident Master Gardeners; explore our Pine Rockland and Hardwood Hammock Demonstration Forests for added inspiration.

The Gray Catbird is among a host of bird species drawn to the native American Beautyberry bush for its delectable fruit. Photo: Will Stuart

BONUS Buys: Limited quantities of wild "Tropical Honey" produced in our on-campus beehives and harvested/bottled by TAS board member Kirsten Hines • Books for admiring/inspiring: Gardens of Miami and Attracting Birds to South Florida Gardens.

FREE Walks & Talks: Birding for Beginners, 9 a.m. • Planting for Pollinators, 10 a.m.

Attendees should observe masking & social distancing protocols!

CASH or CHECKS preferred | Limited on-site Parking